LEGAL MINDS SOLICITORS

My involvement in Earle Page College and the UNE residential system exposed me to the many opportunities that Armidale and the New England have to offer. Now, eight years later, to be a member of the community as a young professional, I feel my opportunities are endless.

I believe working in a thriving regional centre, such as Armidale, has provided me with a much more 'hands on' experience to what other graduates entering the legal profession may have. From early on, exposure to managing a case load, court appearances, briefing barristers and liaising with clients on family law, trusts and estate matters are skills I have been able to develop. Being part of a young team that is led by a strong and enthusiastic leader has provided the circumstances for my confidence and experience to grow.

Earlier this year I was appointed as a Director of Legal Minds, a role which few solicitors in NSW have access to at my age.

I practice in the tenacious and challenging circles of civil litigation. Thinking together with the Legal Minds team provides me with inspiration and opportunity to achieve client goals and protect and enforce the rights of individuals and businesses in such legal domains as employment law, commercial, insurance, contract, defamation, debt enforcement, rural disputes and negligence matters.

While characterised by its adversarial nature, litigation is essentially about dispute resolution, which also utilises my skills as one of the few nationally accredited mediators in the New England region.

I am a passionate soccer enthusiast and also support the wider community as a Director of two local not for profit organisations, including the North North-West Community Legal Service and the Displaced Peoples Organisation.

After being admitted to the Court to practice as a solicitor, I was attracted to practicing law in the country. As a part of the Legal Minds team, I have had the opportunity to develop and expand on my skills and specialise in property and commercial law. I am also interested in estates and estate planning.

Practicing within a regional centre is more than just practicing law; it is about being a part of a community and contributing in the growth and development of the local area. Wool, for example, is very important to our region, and I participate and contribute in promoting Australian Merino Wool in my capacity as a director with The Australian Wool Fashion Awards.

The Legal Minds team is all about thinking together, so that we are able to provide personal service and comprehensive solutions to all legal matters brought to us by our clients.

Even though each of the solicitors at Legal Minds have particular strengths and interests in law, it is our process of thinking together about individual and community matters that makes working in a regional centre so stimulating.
